"The Bubble" along the perimeter of the Dells East Quarry.

Implementing Operation Plans for Strategic Growth

Bob Hoffman

Mine planning and quarry development have been a pivotal strategy for years. Utilizing historical data, implementing future metrics and the company's vision provides direction for future growth. The how, what, and when of the process involves team members from corporate down to the individual sites to achieve the results needed.

For example, in 2016 a study of aggregate reserves was developed for the Dell Rapids East Quarry. In 2022, it was updated and approved for implementation. The construction of what is now known as "The Bubble" started in 2023 and continues in 2024. Fill material to create the bubble includes both engineered fill and overburden (clay) from both Dell Rapids quarries. The material included over 180,000 yd³ of clay from the West Quarries where 7.4 acres were stripped, in return, exposing 1.3 million tons of reserves. With assistance from our Myrl & Roy's fleet, this material was hauled to the East Quarry for placement by a hired contractor. At the East Quarry, 350,000 yd³ of fines material was used to build a berm around the perimeter of the 54-acre future plant site. This site will include rail service and room for future development. In summary, mine planning, production, engineering, and rolling stock all take a team to research and implement for success!

Mustache Mention : Office Fun

The Sioux Falls Office added a dash of 'stache' as a welcome back to a mustached accounting team member, Miles Olofson, from vacation. A great reminder that if things get hairy, don't forget to have fun!

New Addition - Meet Megan

Megan Barkley has recently joined the team as our Communications Specialist and Executive Assistant. With a degree in Biology from Minnesota State University, Mankato, Megan comes to us with a versatile skill set that encompasses support and leadership functions across different industries. In her new role, she will be the coordinator of corporate communications. She will be responsible for maintaining a positive company image in compliance with branding and company fundamentals. We are excited to have her on our team.

Join us on social media!

As part of our ongoing efforts to enhance communication, we would like to take our company's online presence up a notch! But we can't do that without your support.
